April 2011

ARIZONA SUNSET
BY JOYCE HARVEY

Southern Arizona is filled with beautiful saguaro cactus. They are very tall and do not grow any arms until they are 70 years old. They can live for 150 to 200 years.

Frank Heilman and I camped amid these beautiful cactus at Gilbert Ray National Park near west Tucson, AZ. We also visited the Saguaro National Park visitors center which has maps of trails and drives through the best of the cactus viewing areas. They also have videos, books, ranger walks and a bookstore with extensive information on desert flora and fauna. While we were there the temperature dropped to the low teens and there was concern that some of the cactus could not survive. Our trip to Kitts Peak to look through one of 27 telescopes had to be delayed a week because it was minus 15 degrees on top with winds.

After visiting the Biosphere, north east of Tucson, where scientists lived for two years, we drove miles and miles north east through an even more beautiful Saguaro forest of tall cactus. They must have been even older because they had so many arms; some had over 15 arms and were very very tall. Camping amid these awesome regal cacti is simply breathtaking; especially at sunset. Then the stars come out and adorn the skies behind them. It is really wonderful to be with someone who appreciates nature's beauty--just as all of you photographers know.
